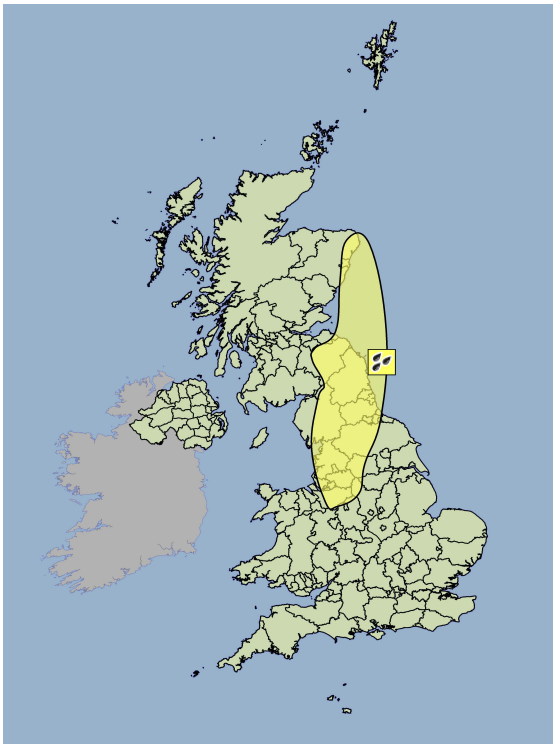
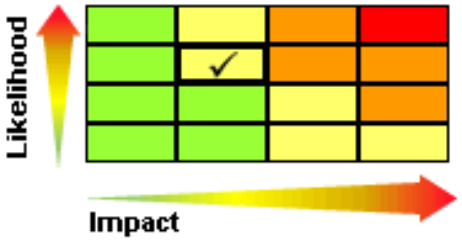
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
An active frontal system lying from eastern Scotland to the West Country will continue to produce areas of heavy rain today, particularly across northern England. Hourly totals of 10-20 mm of rain are possible in places at first with localised 3 hourly totals reaching 35 mm - the rain easing from the south through the afternoon.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 10:40 on Fri, 14th Aug 2015 until 18:00 on Fri, 14th Aug 2015

Further heavy rain is expected across northern parts of England and fringing into parts of eastern Scotland - the rain gradually easing from the south.

Be aware of the risk of localised disruption due to surface water flooding, with the greatest risk over northern England at first.

This is an update to the existing Yellow Warning to reduce the area at risk, whilst a separate Yellow Warning will be issued for east and southeast England.
